He wrote mainly in Sesotho's tongue, but his most popular book, Chaka, was translated into English and other languages. Thomas Mofolo Biography was born in Khojane, Lesotho, on December 22, 1876. He was educated in the local schools of the Society of Evangely Lica of Paris and obtained a professor certificate in 1898. While he was working on the deposit of books in Morija, some of the missionaries encouraged him to write what would become the first novel in the south of Soto, Moeti Oa Bochabela (1907; the East Traveler). The edifying story of a young conversion of Sotho Chieftain for Christianity, is intelligently intertwined with traditional myths and compliment poems. Her success led to other young teachers to try the hand in the writing of fiction, launching one of the first literary movements of the sub-Saharan Africa. The next book of Mofolo, Pitseng (1910), is constructed about a very clumsy love plot in imitation of the European fiction. He contains perceptive descriptions of native customs in Lesotho and South Africa and a attentive, in any way encounters, appreciating the influence of Christianity in traditional wedding customs. Mofolo Then Chaka (1925), a fictional account of Zulu Conqueror who built a powerful impact during the first quarter of the XIX. Under the mofolo pen, the hectic chaka career (Shaka) becomes the tragedy of a heroic figure whose ambition presents the insane cruelty and the final ruin. [1] The biggest main contribution of the Black Africa for the corpus of modern world literature. Chaka is a masterpiece The narrative follows the austere growth and declining curve that controls the structure of the classical classic at its best; Psychological motivation is markedly enlightened at all points; And the author intelligently manipulated the supernatural element, which is equipped with true symbolic value. Although the missionaries were sensitive to the high quality Literary Chaka, the photos of life prize -Cristan that the book contains the reluctant ones in publicate it. In his disappointment, mofolo left for South Africa in 1910 and gave up writing. For several years he was a labor agent, recruiting workers to the gold mines of transval and the Christmas plantations. After 1927, he bought a store in Lesotho; In 1937, he acquired a farm in the South Africa, but he was dumped under the law of land Bantu. In 1940, a broken and sick man, he returned to Lesotho, where he died on September 8, 1948. Recognition and legacy The Library of the National University of Lesotho is named the Library Thomas Mofolo in honor of Him. In 1976, the inaugural motolo-plomer, created by Nadine Gordimer and thus named in honor of Mofolo and the South African writer William Plomer, [2] was granted the Mzamane Mulpel. [3] The Judges for this year were Chimua Achebe, Alan Paton and Adam Small. [2] ACHMAT DANGOOR, JM COETZEE (1977 [4]), Njabulo Simakahle Ndebele, Rose Zwi (1982 [5]) and Peter Wilhelm were other destinations of the study. Thomas Mofolo for pending Sesotho fiction was launched in South Africa on February 6, 2019, to be granted in December.
