Anxiety with agoraphobia

Warning: Can only detect less than 5000 charactersA little more time. People with social anxiety disorders tend to believe that other people are not reliable or reliable, which can mean that people anxious sometimes need more time than their non-anxious partners to open. At the beginning of the report, there is embarrassment to meet, the question of how fast it is spreading things about you, and this is the kind of this dance of vulnerability that happens. And anxiety can extremely complicate this. The symptoms of anxiety alone make more vulnerable, so give them some time while learning to trust you. Consider encouraging them to be treated if they are not your partner should not face their anxiety on their own, but certainly you should certainly not be their only support. Of course, it's up to the person with anxiety to take the initiative to look for treatment. But if you notice the
