You'll need your government-issued ID to gain entrance into the testing facility. Student ID cards are not a valid form of identification. The testing facility will also require your ECEES Appointment Confirmation Letter. They can look this form up during check-in, but having it with you greatly speeds up the process. You are not allowed to take any books into the exam room. They will provide you with a handbook for use during the test. Expect to spend six hours in the testing center. That means you'll need to bring a bottle of water to keep you hydrated. In between testing sections, you're given 25 minutes to stretch your legs, clear your mind, and have a snack. Bring something light like an apple or banana. The test is given on computer. It's fairly straight-forward. No adaptive difficulty at all. Just a linear test that does not change difficulty based on how you are performing.
