The first game to include a cow was the machine: Pinbot bride (see below) and the responsible man was programmer Brian Eddy (shadow designer, attack by Mars and medieval madness). On the question for which he replied: "Why breathe? Why eating? Why live without cows in flipper?" The history of the cow arrives in many different versions. This is the "truth about the cow" according to Mark Penacho: "The cow in the fire (sauce) had nothing to do with the cows that appeared everywhere later. A person (who will remain unnamed, BRE) started to put. The cows in the games worked, and in the end the people started to copy (there are also cow things to happen his home). It was out of hand after it was the fact that a person at the time (SS) has done the whole point the effects of the matrix for all the games did not do anything to curb that trend. I felt at once the saw people hired that this was a kind of jab at Pinball Designer Joe Kaminkow (which does not it was, speaks of vain). "Another thing that appears in many flipper machines is the word Doho, which is well hidden in the animations on the DOT matrix display. Scott Slomiany (AKA. Scott Matrix) "Created" The Doho and is destined for Doris Ho. ScottÅ e 's wife.
